POOL RULES: Persons who enter a pool and purchase tickets should make clear to the Nenana Ice Classic the names of those belonging to the pool. Please do this in one of three ways:

1) Write Key on the front of one of the pool's tickets and write the names of the pool members on the back of that ticket.

Drop a list of pool members in the red can with your tickets;
 Send a list of your members to the Ice Classic office in Nenana.

hese rules are for your own protection.

This year is the 101st year Alaskans will watch for the exact minute of breakup on the Tanana River at Nenana.

Science:

The river usually freezes over during the months of Oct. and Nov. The ice continues to get thicker throughout the winter with the average thickness being 42" on April 1. Depending on the temperature, snow cover, wind, etc., the ice may freeze slightly more and then start to melt. The ice melts on the top due to the weather and on the bottom due to the water flow.

River:

The tripod is planted two feet into the Tanana River ice between the highway bridge and the railroad bridge at Nenana, just upriver from the Nenana River tributary. It is 300 feet from shore and connected to a clock that stops as the ice goes out.

Prize:

In 1917 railroad engineers bet $800 guessing when the river would break up. Last year, in the classic's 100th year, the winners shared the prize money of $300,000. $13,915,096 has been paid during the past 100 years. Payoff will be made June 1st Classic cans. 2017.

Tickets:

Tickets are sold throughout Alaska from February 1 through April 5. A guess costs $2.50. All your tickets must be filled out with name, address, and date and time of guess. Put the tickets in one of the red Nenana Ice Classic cans.
